On day of the wedding, we picked up the five cakes from Costco (probably room temperature 70 F since they weren't in the cooler) at 4PM. Put the cakes into this box, used 8 lbs. of dry ice (-109F) broken up with a hammer into smaller chunks in the middle section, generally not in contact with the plastic cake boxes. 4 hours later at 8PM the inside of the insulated box measured 39F. I'd guess it would have been cooler if the cakes were chilled to begin with. Probably about 4 lbs. of dry ice remained. Box was stored indoors with 74 F ambient temperature. I'd wager these would have been fine outside in 85 in the shade, but you never know. Please do not enter your email address in the Name field or in the comment content.
